MANY MEN OF MANY MINDS.

Diversity of Views as to Remedies for Human Ills—Cure for Insomnia.

Now, I do not wish to be understood as desiring to prejudice my readers against the medical profession, the members of which are, as a rule, gentlemen of learning and of remarkable skill in their very different department of science, though I sometimes do think that some of them are too apt to indulge in guess work rather than take the trouble of a really careful, intelligent and conscientious diagnosis. An old friend attending the diverse results of his interviews with the doctors, remarked furthermore that, outside of the medical fraternity, there is even a greater diversity of views among men as to remedies for human ills.

"Within the past six weeks," said he, "when mentioning in private conversations with friends my inability to sleep well, I have had all kinds of devices and remedies recommended to me. 'Eat a raw onion on going to bed,' said one, 'it will make sleep come right off.' 'Count 100 slowly, and then count the same backward,' said another. 'Take long, measured breaths,' said another. 'Concentrate your eyes upon some one object, and think of nothing else,' was suggested as a sure sleep inducer. 'Take a lively walk, and rub yourself with a wet, rough towel before retiring,' said one who had tried it and knew. 'Adopt the massage treatment of kneading and rubbing,' recommended one who had faith.

"Try the faith cure," said a grave-faced lady. 'Call in a magnetic doctor.' 'bathe in hot water before going to bed.' 'take a Turkish bath.' 'drink a bottle of lager beer an hour before retiring.' 'take bromide of potassium.' 'eat no supper.' 'take a pill of pure brandy before getting into bed.' 'turn your eyes and your mind inside of your head and think of nothing.' 'sleep on a pillow filled with pine tree needles.' 'take a sea voyage.' 'go to a metaphysician,' etc., etc. These are some of the many remedies recommended. I have tried them all—gave each of them a fair show—but they were of no use. The fact is, what in such a case is the proper thing for one person is the very worst thing for another, and if you take everybody's remedy for your ill you will run a risk of killing yourself outright. The only prudent way is to consult an experienced, reputable, thorough going physician, follow his advice faithfully and avoid all quacks and empirics."—"Stroller" in Chicago Journal.

The Pay of Some Ministers.

Mr. Beecher, who has just returned from England, had, by the way, a very successful trip, financially and otherwise. He has a salary of $21,000 a year from Plymouth church, and refused a substantial increase which was at one time suggested; he earns some $15,000 a year by his lectures, and has a moderate income as an author. Formerly he received a salary of $5,000 a year as an editor. No clergyman in the United States has ever received so large a pecuniary return from his labors as Mr. Beecher. In a single year he has earned over $50,000, yet he has only a very moderate fortune.

His former friend, Dr. Storrs, has an income of about $15,000 a year as a clergyman and lecturer, living in fine style on Brooklyn Heights, one of the finest urban localities in this country, and is said to be worth $250,000. He is a well meaning man, and is president of the Long Island Historical society, to which, in his life of busy labors, he devotes considerable attention. He is, I believe, one of the wealthiest clergymen in Brooklyn. In New York the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, the son of the late Gen. Dix, is understood to have a fortune of $70,000. One of the clerical pots of the late half-defunct Mrs. Morgan, the sale of whose art effects made such a furor, is said to have received and kept, as with a death clutch, some $600,000 in government bonds, which the lady, in a moment of aberration, appears to have given him.—Cor. Philadelphia Press.

Outlook Over Toronto.

From the top of the tower of the great university there is an excellent outlook over Toronto. In front and spreading at our feet is the broad, bright cricket green, with the town stretching away on either hand and running down to the edge of the lake, across which is the narrow streak made by the low lying island that bounds the harbor. Beyond are the sparkling waters of Lake Ontario, reaching out to the horizon to right and left, while far away over them, directly southward, is seen a faint little silver cloud of spray, rising from the falls of Niagara. All about us the busy town is scattered, its broad, straight streets crossing at right angles; its red and white brick buildings, in clusters or embosomed in foliage; its many steeples and spires rising above them.

Far off in the northern background the land rises up in pretty hills 200 to 300 feet high, with villas dotted upon their green fields and wooded slopes. The picture is like a map, showing thrift and prosperity, while in every direction the incomplete buildings, with men toiling about them like little busy ants, and the gentle, distant noise of the builder's hammer and trowel, tell of the growth of the vigorous city. Such is Canada's "Queen City," and probably in most respects the best type the Dominion to-day presents of a successful and expanding municipality.—Cor. London Times.

XLIXth CONGRESS.

Second Session.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 8. SENATE.

WASHINGTON, December 8.—Senator Edmunds presented a memorial in favor of a constitutional amendment empowering Congress to pass uniform laws on the subject of marriage and divorce. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

After the introduction of a number of bills the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill reported by Senator Blair, from the Select Committee on Woman Suffrage (February 3d, 1886) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States extending the right of suffrage to women, and was addressed by Senator Blair in support of the bill.

At 1 o'clock the Senate went into secret session, referred some nominations, and, at 4:40 P. M., adjourned.

HOUSE.

After the reading of the Journal the Speaker laid before the House a letter from the Director of the Mint inclosing the draft of a bill for the issue of subsidiary silver coin. Referred.

Mr. Boutelle, of Maine, asked for unanimous consent to put upon its passage a bill admitting free of duty material to be used in rebuilding the town of Eastport, Maine, which was destroyed by fire October 14, 1886.

Mr. Breckenridge, of Arkansas, objected to the immediate consideration of the bill, expressing the opinion that the people of the whole country were as much in need of relief from taxation as the people of Eastport. He was glad to find the gentleman from Maine confessing that the tariff was a tax, and he would insist that the bill should take the regular course and be sent to the committee which had charge of the subject of taxation.

The electoral count bill was taken up and discussed by Messrs. Dibble, Cooper, Eden, and Adams. The House, at 4 P. M., adjourned.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The President yesterday nominated Naval Constructor T. D. Wilson to be chief of the bureau of construction and repair, Navy Department, and to be chief constructor of the navy. This is a re-appointment. Mr. Wilson's term of office expired March 2, 1886, and since that date a vacancy has existed in the office. The chief clerk of the bureau was designated to act as chief pending an appointment, although Constructor Wilson supervised the affairs of the Bureau in the interim and continued on duty in charge of the completion of the new cruisers and of the preparation of plans.

The President has appointed Thomas Moonlight, of Kansas, to be Governor of Wyoming Territory. Mr. Moonlight was the late Democratic candidate for Governor of Kansas.

Mrs. Cleveland returned to Washington yesterday.

A Washington Shooting.

WASHINGTON, December 8.—George N. Walker, a brother of Major Walker, late chief of police of this city, to-day shot and probably fatally wounded Mr. J. C. Miller, a patent attorney. The shooting occurred on F street, near the Patent Office. Walker fired five shots, one of which penetrated Miller's abdomen. Walker justified his action by saying Miller had vilified his wife, and had also threatened his life. When he met Miller to-day on the street the latter, Walker asserts, attempted to draw a revolver, as he supposed, to carry his threat into execution; but he was too quick for Miller and disabled him before he could use his weapon.

Good Work for the Life-Saving Station.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 8.—The signal-corps station at Washwood, N. C., reports, under date of December 7, the schooner Annie F. Conlon, of Portsmouth, N. H., bound from Boston to Baltimore, ashore three miles north of False Cape, Virginia. The crew of eight men were all saved.

The Congress of Trade.

COLUMBUS, O., December 8.—The congress of Trades' Unions met here to-day. It was largely attended. This Congress is opposed to the Knights of Labor.

License or No License.

BOSTON, Mass., December 8.—Of the seventeen Massachusetts cities which had their local elections yesterday thirteen voted for no liquor license, three for prohibition, and one did not vote. Last year the same cities voted thirteen for license and four for prohibition.

Probable Double Murder.

COLUMBUS, GA., December 8.—News has reached this city of another tragedy on the line of the Georgia Midland road. James Brooks is a contractor, and his work lies near Jenkinsville, in Pike county. A man named Ward, residing in the neighborhood, and Brooks had a difficulty, in which Ward attacked Brooks with a knife and cut him ten times. Brooks then knocked Ward down with a stick and inflicted a fatal stab with his knife. Ward died almost instantly and Brooks is likely to die also.

Cold Blooded Murder.

LEBANON, IND., December 8.—A cold blooded murder occurred at the residence of Isaac Medeker, where a dance was going on late Monday night. Isaac Smith was considerably under the influence of liquor and had made himself somewhat disagreeable, but at last agreed to quit dancing, but in a few minutes signified his intention to again take a part. At this moment George Scott stepped up and said: "If you can't keep order, I can;" and at once shot Smith through the head.

Southward the Star of Empire.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., December 8. The movement of the great iron masters of the North toward the South is becoming more manifest every day. Yesterday Perry & Co., the stove founders of Albany, N. Y., closed negotiations for removing their entire plant from New York to the South.

The tobacco sales at Danville for November were 1,619,828 pounds at an average of $8.33 per hundred. The sales for the corresponding month last year were 3,389,993 pounds.

The Inner Man in Morocco.

Dining with the sultan of Morocco is more of an honor than a pleasure, according to the account of a recent visitor connected with the French embassy. The sultan is even more of a spiritual than a temporal monarch, a sort of crowned saint, ex-otico, and therefore it is beneath his sacred dignity to dine in person with his guests and he deputed a representative from his suite. The palace also is too sacred a shrine to be the scene of such festivity, and the dinner is usually served in the garden of the summer palace, outside the town of Fez. When the narrator dined in this second hand way with his sacred majesty the weather was hot, and the dinner was served in a town palace garden beneath orange, lemon and pomegranate trees, where the buttermilk, corn flowers, and daisies grew so tall that they mingled with the boughs, and the guests had hard work to fight their way on home back to the table, or rather tray.

A drum major, like a steward with a baton, headed the procession of slaves bearing the food on trays of wood with deep borders and conical covers of straw. The removal of these covers disclosed a frightful spectacle of fricassees of sheep and chickens, prepared with honey, sugar, syrup and fruits, and all imaginable and unimaginable horrors possible to cookery. The only dishes which a European could eat was one of mutton (which was terrible greasy) and the conchoussou. The slave who held this awkwardly spilled it into his sleeves and bosom, and then conscientiously turned it out on the plate again. This upset the European stomachs and desire to indulge in it, though they found that the slave knew etiquette. The proper way to eat conchoussou is to take a quantity in the palm of the hand, eat it as best you may, and return the remainder—for the whole never will quit the palm—into the common dish, lest the other guests should be deprived of the choice delicacy.—The Argonaut.

Mr. Everts and His Auditor.

The president has described to a friend the circumstances of shutting off of Hon. William M. Everts at the ceremony of the unveiling of the Bartholdi statue. It was the most appalling noise that I ever heard at any celebration," he said. "Every fellow who had hold of a bell or a whistle cord appeared to be pulling with all his might and determined to be the last to stop. It seemed to me that the getaways made from Bedloe's island to induce the whistlers and bell ringers to stop was taken as a signal of encouragement to go on. I had been told that Mr. Everts had given instructions that when he had spoken eleven minutes the veil was to be dropped from the face of the statue. When the eleven minutes had expired the signal was given, although the speech had not concluded. The fact that followed the dropping of the flag from the face of the statue was terrible and prolonged. Mr. Everts kept on for a few moments, his words inaudible to any one. Finding that the noise was to be kept up for an indefinite time, he turned to me, and, standing only a foot away, he went on talking while whistles, bells, and cheers kept up an accompaniment. He got through before the saluting steamers had ceased tooting. I think that I am the only person who heard that part of Mr. Everts' speech. The situation was interesting, though confusing, and I suppose I shall be pardoned if I admit that I have no very clear idea of what the gifted orator was saying. As good luck would have it, the noises had entirely ceased when it came to my turn to speak, and I had little difficulty in making myself heard by persons on the outermost edge of the throng before the platform."—Cor. New York Times.

New York Stock Market.

REVIEW.

NEW YORK, December 8.—The feverish close of last night's market very naturally was apparent at the opening to-day, and no doubt some outside stop-orders were reached, and that the quick decline of yesterday frightened many weak holders, the bears doing their utmost to aggravate the desire to sell, and we think very probably in so doing overreached themselves, and may have to cover at higher prices. The sole argument against a permanently bull market is the price of money, which, as usual towards the end of the year, promises to rule high, but with any due amount of conservatism, and that seems to be well observed, we see no reason to anticipate its becoming a very detrimental factor. The general volume of business has been smaller, and there seems to be a disposition to pause for a day or so. This is all the better for the ultimate result. The market closed firm.
